City behind golf course ad campaign

'Ethical line.' Website, radio, newspaper ads have $90K price tag

BERNICE PONTANILLA
bernice.pontanilla@metronews.ca

Councillor Jenny Gerbasi said an "ethical line has been crossed" with the revelation the City of Winnipeg is behind a slick $90,000 website and ad campaign calling for council to get out of the golf business.

The website, getresponsiblewinnipeg.ca, states: "After years of revenue loss, your city golf courses are stuck in an $8.4-million trap."

It includes a small City of Winnipeg logo beside the words "another initiative of Responsible Winnipeg."

The site was updated Thursday afternoon, removing form emails with a pre-written message to councillors.

A city report, to be discussed at Friday's alternate service delivery committee meeting, recommends leasing out four golf courses and declaring a fifth as surplus, allowing it to be sold.

The report needs two-thirds of city council's support. It's not clear the votes are there, which could explain the lobbying.

Mayor Sam Katz said the campaign responds to all of the "misinformation" on the issue.

"We have a very open and transparent process where people can come to these committees that will be dealing with it ... and this way everybody coming will have all of the facts," he said.

The campaign includes radio and newspaper ads, bus boards and digital signs.

Gerbasi fears that while councillors can see through this lobbying attempt, Winnipeggers may believe this is a grassroots initiative.

Union, city clash over golf courses debate

Strong words. CUPE 500 head called councillor's comments 'reckless'

bernice.pontanilla@metronews.ca

The proposed lease of four city-owned golf courses is revealing deep divisions between senior city hall officials and its largest union.

Coun. Russ Wyatt (Transcona), chair of both the finance and alternate service delivery (ASD) committees, said during two interviews with Metro this week that the ASD committee is looking at putting forward a dozen initiatives similar to what is taking place with the golf courses.

Coun. Russ Wyatt said ads by CUPE Local 500 are 'malicious' and 'uncalled for.' BERNICE PONTANILLA/METRO

Then he took aim at CUPE Local 500, which represents the largest chunk of City of Winnipeg employees.

"At every turn, if the union decides that it wants to declare war and say, 'No, no, no,' then ultimately the people of Winnipeg will have to decide," said Wyatt after a press conference announcing a housing plan for Transcona West on Tuesday.

"Who should run the city? The union? Is that what it's come down to? That's the question I ask, cause we've had some pretty negative attack ads by CUPE launched on this council in the last six to eight months, and they've been, I think, very unfair and they've been malicious and completely uncalled for."

Wyatt also questioned why the union didn't bid on the golf courses.

Mike Davidson, president of CUPE 500, called Wyatt's comments ridiculous.

"He's fully aware that the modified bidding process is illegal for us to enter into,

Quoted

"It's unbelievable what's taking place here."

and for whatever reason he's turned into a very angry individual and has a vendetta with CUPE."

Davidson called the purported losses due to the golf courses "artificial figures." Furthermore, he said that when the city created a separate operating agency to run the golf courses in 2002, all of a sudden they started having to pay taxes on it to the city.

"These aren't losses, these are transfers to the city's general revenues and they'll probably vanish when they attempt to turn this over to a contractor," he said.

Broadcast Group. FAB 94.3, QX 104 sold pending CRTC approval

Two Winnipeg radio stations have been sold to new owners pending CRTC approval.

The Jim Pattison Broadcast Group announced Thursday they've inked a deal to take over oldies station FAB 94.3 (CHIQ-FM) from Bell Media and country station QX 104 (CFQX-FM) from Astral Media Inc.

The deal includes a third station in Calgary and is a result of a proposed merger between Astral and Bell Media that requires them to sell off certain stations to comply with the CRTC's Common Ownership Policy, which limits the number of stations a company can own in a single market.

"This is a very important acquisition for our Broadcast Group and, with the approval of this transaction from the CRTC, we will expand our presence in the major markets of Calgary and Winnipeg, which we have been focusing on for some time," said Jim Pattison Broadcast Group chairman Rick Arnish in a release.

"We are really looking forward to working with and learning from the superb teams at these separate Winnipeg operations as we expand into a new marketplace for our group."

Arnish told Metro the group has no plans to change the format of either Winnipeg station if the CRTC approves the sale. SHANE GIBSON/METRO

Local media treated to busts at photo op for 15th annual program's launch

shane.gibson@metronews.ca

If the media launch of MPI's annual RoadWatch campaign was any indication, police can expect to be busy during check-stop season on Manitoba roads this summer.

Within minutes of setting up a stop just outside of the Perimeter Highway on Lagimodiere Boulevard Thursday as a photo op for local media, a passenger in a car packed tight for a weekend at the cabin was charged for having an open liquor case in the car.

"This should have been in the trunk ... and now I just lost 12 beers," said Colby Hemming, 18, pointing to the case of Coronas on his lap left empty after RCMP made him drain the bottles on the side of the road. "This is all my bad, I should have known ahead of time."

As well as guaranteeing himself a cameo on local news broadcasts, the stop was also a pricey one for the Winnipeg teen, who got slapped with a $240 ticket for the open liquor and a $300 ticket for not wearing a seatbelt.

Then, as police were writing up Hemming's tickets, another man and woman were taken into the back seat of separate police cars after RCMP found pot and hash in their vehicle.

"Our work is not done, clearly we have to do more awareness," said RCMP spokesperson Cst. Line Karpish of the quick start to the check-stop season. "Either by drug or by alcohol, these people don't have their A-game behind the wheel."

The RoadWatch campaign, which kicks off this weekend and runs until November, sees MPI provide Winnipeg police, RCMP and several other Manitoba police agencies $600,000 to cover the cost of additional check stops throughout the summer.

Crime. Manitoba wants Hells Angels permanently listed as criminal group

Manitoba Justice is moving to have the Hells Angels motorcycle club permanently listed as a criminal organization.

The move would make it easier for the province to seize property from gang members and evict them from houses under various provincial laws.

Currently, Crown prosecutors must prove the gang is a criminal organization during each court case.

The application to have the Hells Angels permanently listed will be reviewed by a three-member panel made up of people who are neither police officers nor government employees.

Waited 6 hours.

Opposition party wants public inquest after woman in her 60s died after she left ER without seeing doctor

Manitoba's Opposition party is calling for an inquest into the death of a woman who left a hospital emergency room without being seen by a doctor.

The Progressive Conservatives say Bonnie Guagliardo went to the Victoria General Hospital in Winnipeg in February after falling in her home and hitting her head.

The Tories say Guagliardo, who was in her 60s, was given an initial assessment, but went home after waiting six hours to see a doctor.

She died the next morning. The government says an investigation by the regional health authority is already underway.

But Tory health critic Cameron Friesen says a public inquest is needed to examine what went wrong.

"Manitobans need answers on this, and they need to have a high degree of confidence in the health-care system," Friesen said Thursday.

Friesen suggested the case is similar to that of Brian Sinclair, a 45-year-old double-amputee, who died after waiting for 34 hours in an emergency room in 2008.

Friesen released statistics obtained from the Winnipeg Regional Health Authority that indicate a growing number of people are leaving emergency rooms without being seen by a physician.

That happened more than 23,000 times in the 2011-12 fiscal year, an increase of more than 2,000 from the previous year, according to the report obtained under Manitoba's freedom of information law.

Inquests can be called by the government or the chief medical examiner into specific deaths. They are overseen by a provincial court judge and witnesses testify under oath.

Duffy resigns from Conservative caucus

Unanswered questions. Senator stepping aside amidst spending scandal

Senator Mike Duffy resigned from the Conservative caucus to sit as an independent Thursday night amid controversy over his housing claims, leaving a host of questions about the nature of his expenses and why the prime minister backed him for so long.

The employment status of Stephen Harper's chief of staff, Nigel Wright, remains unchanged — despite his secret gift to Duffy to help repay the improper expenses.

Only a week ago, the Conservative government was hailing Duffy's leadership for repaying the funds the Senate said he owed. Senate Leader Marjory LeBreton declared the matter closed.

But then it came to light that Wright had cut Duffy a personal cheque to cover the repayment in March. Harper's office characterized it as a personal gift, but this week Duffy called it a loan.

The Canadian Press reported Thursday that Duffy campaigning for the Conservatives during the April 2011 election while claiming to be on Senate business.

"Mr. Duffy's claim that he had secured a bank loan came as a complete surprise. All of the revelations relating to the expenses during the campaign are new," a government official said on condition of anonymity.

Greenhouse gases. PM says technology is key to reducing emissions

Technological change will prove to be the key to cutting greenhouse-gas emissions, Prime Minister Stephen Harper told a blue-chip audience on Thursday.

Simply imposing emissions targets or trying to cap economic growth to reduce emissions isn't going to work, Harper said during a question-and-answer session at the Council on Foreign Relations in New York City.

"I am convinced that, over time, we are not going to effectively tackle emissions unless we develop the lower-emissions technology in energy and other sectors," he said.

"That is the thing that will allow us to square economic growth with emissions reduction and environmental protection. I'm convinced if we cannot square those, we are not going to make progress globally."

Any realistic international agreement to limit emissions has to cover everyone, not just the developed world, he added.

"We need a mandatory, international protocol that includes all significant emitters, and if we do not get that we will not be able to control global emissions."

Hadfield slowly readjusting to life back on Earth

Weighty issues.

Astronaut once again feeling effects of gravity, says his body 'is catching up with the change'

Until a few days ago, Canadian astronaut Chris Hadfield was responsible for making sure the International Space Station stayed on course.

Now that he's back on Earth, he can't even drive a car for the next few weeks.

It's been an intense adjustment period for the 53-year-old astronaut who described Thursday how, after months of floating in weightlessness, he's suddenly grappling with the painful effects of gravity.

"Right after I landed, I could feel the weight of my lips and tongue and I had to change how I was talking," Hadfield told reporters during a video news conference from Houston.

"I hadn't realized that I learned to talk with a weightless tongue."

The latest health update by Raffi Kuyumjian, his flight surgeon, said Thursday that the three-time space visitor was starting to show noticeable improvement in his walk and equilibrium.

But Hadfield was not ready to put the pedal to the metal. Kuyumjian said it usually takes about three weeks before a returning astronaut can drive a car again.

When Hadfield spoke to reporters, he said his body felt confused and banged-up by the effects of gravity after his long duration visit.

He said he had to make a conscious effort to keep his head aloft. That he was dizzy. And because the callouses were gone from his feet, his footsteps felt like walking on hot coals.

A first trip to the gym was excruciating, he said, because it felt like two people had jumped on him when he was trying to move on a mat.

Things were so different in space.

"My body was quite happy living in space without gravity," he said.

"(It's) a very empowering environment where you can touch the wall and do somersaults, where you can move a refrigerator around with your fingertips and never worry about which way was up.

"Well, that all changed when our Soyuz (capsule) slammed back into the Earth. And my body is catching up with the change."

Hadfield returned to Earth on Monday night and was flown to Houston to be reunited with his wife and to undergo tests and debriefings.

Hadfield also announced that his use of social media, which earned him an international audience, won't end with his return to Earth.

He had 20,000 Twitter followers when he blasted off with Russian space colleague Roman Romanenko and NASA astronaut Tom Marshburn on Dec. 19, 2012. This week back on terra firma, Hadfield was hovering around one million followers. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Double-amputee completes trip from Edmonton to Calgary

Spencer West scaled Mt. Kilimanjaro on his hands last summer but said completing the trek between Edmonton and Calgary was an even greater challenge.

"I'm tired, my arms are killing me, I'm ready for a few days of sleep, but that last little bit to have those kids cheering for us brought up our energy again," he said.

West used his hands and wheelchair to travel 300 kilometres in 11 days with his two best friends, David Johnson and Alex Meers.

The intention of the campaign is to provide 100,000 people with clean water for life, according to West, with a $25 donation providing clean water for one person.

Aptly, path to legalization of pot will be slow going

A long, wild trip.

Taxes are expected to bring in millions of dollars in state revenue

It's one thing to legalize marijuana. It's another to figure out how to sell it, grow it, regulate it, test it and tax it.

Voters in Washington state and Colorado made pot use for adults over 21 legal last fall, but that was just the first step. On Thursday, Washington officials are expected to release the first draft of rules governing the state's new marijuana industry.

Washington's Liquor Control Board has been devising rules for the industry, covering topics such as how the plants will be grown, how marijuana products will be tested for strength and quality, and how many retail stores will be allowed.

The rules are expected to become effective in August, and the board will begin accepting applications for growing, processing and retailing licenses in September. The state expects to issue pot licenses in December.

So when would people be able to legally purchase marijuana in Washington? Probably not until spring of 2014.

While marijuana users look forward to legalized sales, state officials are anticipating that pot taxes would bring Washington hundreds of millions of dollars a year in new revenue.

All of this planning in Washington state — and Colorado — is set against uncertainty about what the ultimate response from the U.S. Justice Department might be. Marijuana remains illegal under federal law.

Convicted. Man was ID'd by victim via blinking

An Ohio man was found guilty Thursday in the shooting death of a man who authorities say identified his assailant by blinking his eyes while paralyzed and hooked up to a ventilator.

Ricardo Woods, 35, was convicted of fatally shooting David Chandler in Cincinnati in 2010 by a jury that began deliberations Tuesday. Woods also was convicted of felonious assault. He could be sentenced to life in prison.

Police interviewed the 35-year-old Chandler while he was hooked up to a ventilator, paralyzed after being shot in the head and neck in 2010 as he sat in a car. He was only able to communicate with his eyes and died about two weeks later.

Prosecutors showed jurors a taped police interview in which they say Chandler blinked three times for "yes" to identify a photo of Woods as his shooter.

Suspect became popular on YouTube after breaking up a fight with his hatchet

A homeless, hatchet-wielding hitchhiker who became an Internet hero earlier this year was arrested Thursday for allegedly beating a New Jersey lawyer to death inside his home.

at a Philadelphia bus station, Union County Prosecutor Theodore Romankow said.

"I believe that everyone is a little safer with this person off the streets," the prosecutor said. Philadelphia police could not immediately be reached for comment.

McGillvary was charged with killing Joseph Galfy, Jr., a Clark, N.J., attorney found dead Monday. Romankow said he will be processed and sent back to New Jersey, where his bail is set at $3 million US.

Galfy's body was found two days after authorities said he met McGillvary in New York City.

Galfy, 73, was found wearing only his underwear and socks by police who went to his home to check on his well-being.

Statements posted on McGillvary's Facebook page following the homicide indicated the encounter was sexual in nature, Romankow said, though he declined to go into specific detail.

Supreme Court

Judges to rule on Walmart baby case

The Supreme Court of Canada is set to decide the fate of a Saskatchewan woman who gave birth in a Walmart bathroom stall and left the newborn in a toilet.

April Halkett was found not guilty in June 2009 of abandoning the baby boy two years earlier in the store in Prince Albert, Sask.

But the Crown disagreed with the verdict and took the case to the Saskatchewan Court of Appeal, which upheld the findings of a trial judge. The judge said he believed Halkett's testimony that she didn't know she was pregnant and left the store because she thought the child was dead.

Lawyers for the Saskatchewan government argued before the province's highest court that the mother had a duty to take reasonable steps to determine if her baby, who was later placed in foster care, was alive. The Supreme Court is scheduled to deliver its judgment Friday.

Mother's Day shooting. Accused brought to court, faces $10-million bond

As the tally of those wounded in a Mother's Day parade shooting in New Orleans ticked up to 20, the suspect made his first court appearance on Thursday, remaining silent as a judge set his bond at $10 million US.

Prosecutors said a witness picked out a photo of Akein Scott, 19, from a lineup. An arrest affidavit said the unidentified witness told investigators that Scott was the person seen in a surveillance video that police released to the public as they searched for him for three days. The witness also said Scott was carrying a silver-and-black semi-automatic handgun at the shooting scene, according to the affidavit.

Scott, shackled and wearing an orange prison jumpsuit, stood by as his court-appointed attorney handled the proceedings.

Magistrate Judge Gerard Hansen set Scott's bond at $10 million — $500,000 on each of the 20 counts in the shooting. Authorities earlier said 19

Bosma case. Police find incinerator on murder suspect's farm property Police in Hamilton, Ont., have seized an incinerator found on the property of a man accused of killing a 32-year-old father after a test drive.

Police believe Tim Bosma was killed on May 6, the same night he took two men for a test drive in a truck he had posted for sale online. His body was found this week, burned beyond recognition.

Dellen Millard, 27, of Toronto, has been charged with first-degree murder, forcible confinement and theft of a vehicle.

Investigators are searching two of his properties in the Waterloo region of southwestern Ontario — an airport hangar and a farm — and say they have removed the incinerator from the farm property.

Det.-Sgt. Matt Kavanagh wouldn't say if the incinerator had been used or not. He expects police will continue searching three vehicles, the hangar and the farm for at least another day. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Mother chases after suspect

A mother whose four-year-old was being abducted chased the suspect and crashed her vehicle into his car, triggering a manhunt, police said Thursday.

The young girl was playing in her yard at an apartment complex in Albuquerque, N.M., when some teenagers saw the kidnapping and ran to alert the girl's mother.

The family called police and the mother jumped into her vehicle and gave chase for about 11 kilometres, unaware the man had pushed the girl out of the Silver Buick before fleeing. The girl was found nearby, uninjured, police said. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Cave paintings could point to early human intelligence

Big brains. Much-mocked relations may have been more advanced, while human IQ keeps dropping

KIERON MONKS
Metro World News

Sophisticated paintings indicate that Neanderthals could have matched human intelligence, analysts claim.

The discovery of "exquisite horses and outlines of bison" in a Spanish cave suggests that mankind's poorly regarded relations were capable of abstract thought, according to research in the science journal Nature.

The artworks were thought to be a product of early humans, but new dating technologies indicate they are more than 40,000 years old and may have originated from before humans lived in Europe.

This follows the recent discovery of sophisticated tools and ornaments that contradicted the primitive depiction of Neanderthals. "They could innovate on their own," said study author Julien Riel-Salvatore of the University of Colorado Denver. "My research suggests that they were a different kind of human, but humans nonetheless."

The Neanderthal brain was larger than man's, although it was believed that large parts were devoted to vision and simple function, producing different thought processes.

But recent discoveries have led to a new debate on the species' capacity and even efforts to clone one for public interest purposes. This has had the support from Harvard genetics professor George Church, who claimed that "Neanderthals think differently than we do. They could even be more intelligent than us."

Another assumption about human intelligence was challenged this week by research claiming that IQs are dropping. The well-known Flynn effect holds that IQ grows three points per decade, but researchers from Umea University in Sweden found that subjects were on average 14 points lower than counterparts from the 19th century.

Step away from the sirloin. Rising food prices lead to more comparison shopping

A recent survey of Canadian adult consumers found a large majority of them believe the price of the food they buy has gone up in the past year and more than half said they are doing more comparison shopping than before.

The Ipsos Reid study done for the Royal Bank suggests the average monthly food bill, not including eating out, for the 3,024 people it surveyed last month was $411 per household.

The survey, conducted April 2 to 15, found 57 per cent of respondents said they comparison shop more than before and 41 per cent said they were more budget conscious or less likely to make impulsive purchases.

- The Beaver Canoe apparel line is slated to arrive in Canadian Target stores on Sept. 8, with the home collection set to hit stores on Sept. 15.

Target is bringing an added dose of Canadiana to its stores north of the border through a new partnership with Beaver Canoe.

The U.S.-based retailer has announced an exclusive collaboration with the Beaver Canoe brand, which is part of Roots Canada.

In what is billed as a first for the brand, the Beaver Canoe for Target collection will feature home decor products. The home collection will include more than 65 pieces, including furniture, pillows, lighting, frames, vases and candles.

The Beaver Canoe collaboration with Target will also encompass a clothing collection for the retailer, which will include hoodies, sweatshirts, T-shirts, track pants and long-sleeve tops for toddlers to adults, in addition to outerwear and accessory offerings for men and women. Prices for items in both the home and apparel collections will range from about $8 to $100.

The partnership marks the second exclusive collaboration between Roots and Target. The retailer carries the Roots Outfitters collection, including fashions for women, men, boys, girls and toddlers.

Riding the rails to promote transit infrastructure

Kadie Ward will leave Halifax on Tuesday for a cross-country VIA Rail tour to highlight transit infrastructure needs. MARK SPOWART/FOR METRO

The birth of Canada's national railway has been widely viewed and written about as the physical link that connected and, ultimately, created our country.

More than 128 years later, London's Kadie Ward is out to show the government that there's more work to be done.

Ward, along with a multimedia crew, will board a VIA Rail train Tuesday in Halifax and ride the rails all the way to Vancouver, where she'll attend the Federation of Canadian Municipalities' annual conference.

Along the way, she'll blog about how cities on the route are successfully using transit and digital infrastructure to connect people.

Ward also plans to highlight shortcomings. The end goal, she said, is convincing municipal, provincial and federal leaders that Ottawa's recent $14-billion commitment to infrastructure upgrades needs to be pumped into more than roads and sewers.

RE: Mayor Defends Use Of Wartime Prostitution, published May 15

May I suggest a proper headline for your article on a Japanese mayor justifying sexual slavery during the Second World War?

"Mayor defends use of wartime rape."

In your article you quote the mayor as saying kidnapping, forcible confinement, rape, torture, and beatings were not sex trade, but in Japan were necessary to "maintain discipline."

Let us be clear: torture and sexual abuse are never necessary, and can never be justified as a means of maintaining discipline. What happened was rape.

The use of so called "comfort women" was neither discipline nor sex trade. It was abuse and torture. Tens of thousands of young women were kidnapped as sex slaves by the Japanese army during the Second World War. Many women were teenagers. Many died. Japan has never formally apologized nor compensated for this war crime. It was a war crime. It was torture. It was rape.

The women who were abused deserve nothing less than a full apology. So does the world.

Synopsis

With Star Trek Into Darkness set to take movie audiences where no audience has gone before over this long weekend, the Reel Guys thought they would have a look at other movies that explore the final frontier.

Star Trek Into Darkness promises to take movie audiences to another galaxy. HANDOUT

Reel Guys

CROUSE AND
MARK BRESLIN

Stars of outer space

Film's final frontier.

With Star Trek the must-see movie this weekend, the Reel Guys look back at their favourite flicks from another world

Richard: Mark, Into Darkness is the best pure popcorn flick of the year so far. It is state of the art in every way, particularly when it comes to the effects. As great as it looks, I'm a sucker for '50s B-movie effects like the 40-foot tall martian in the low budget 1959 space opera The Angry Red Planet. The campy creature was actually a 15-inch tall puppet made from elements of a rat, bat, spider, and crab and was later featured on the cover of the Misfits' album, Walk Among Us. What are some of your favourites?

Mark: Interesting you mentioned Angry Red Planet. I saw it when I was 10 at a downtown matinee and still shudder at the scene where the astronaut was turned into lime Jell-O. But when I was 16, Barbarella became my favourite movie set in outer space — that is, Jane Fonda's cleavage. But if it's cheese you're looking for, I want to nominate Mars Needs Women, a made for TV movie from 1967. Basically a beach party flick set in outer space featuring amazons, strippers and secretetaries, it's best appreciated late at night with the kind of wine that comes in a box.

RC: Box wine has enhanced many a bad movie for me. No wine needed for Moon, a unique and fascinating sci fi film directed by David Bowie's son, Duncan Jones. Set on a space station, it's the story of a worker, played by Sam Rockwell, who discovers he may not be alone on his mission. To say anymore would ruin a really well constructed movie that cares more about ideas than special effects.

MB: Moon is a classy puzzle movie that owes a lot to Kubrick's 2001: A Space Odyssey, the classiest space movie ever, maybe even too classy for its own good. Is it heretical to say that it bored me a bit? Alien sure didn't bore me. And its sequels, even the weak ones, kept me excited. But let's remember that not all space movies are necessarily monster movies. I'm thinking of The Right Stuff and Apollo 13, two films that rightly celebrate the courage and tenacity of the early astronauts. Both very exciting movies, I think.

RC: I agree, and let's not forget In the Shadow of the Moon, a beautifully shot documentary that features real life astronauts like Buzz Aldrin and Neil Armstrong.

MB: On a lighter note, let's not forget Galaxy Quest, the funniest movie to take place in outer space.

The Hangover Part III opens next Friday. HANDOUT

This Hangover is all Alan

Zach Galifianakis. The weirdest part of the trio becomes the focal point of this final instalment

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News in Hollywood

What's one more trip to Las Vegas between friends? The Hangover Part III finds Phil (Bradley Cooper), Stu (Ed Helms) and loose cannon Alan (Zach Galifianakis) teaming up for one last road trip gone wrong. Only this time, Galifianakis' Alan goes from comic relief to main character, which is a particularly risky proposition — at least according to Galifianakis.

Alan really takes centre stage in this instalment. Yeah, as disheartening as that is (laughs). No, I mean we'll see if the audience thinks that an Alan storyline is sustainable for a movie — I mean a lot of Alan. There's a lot of Alan in this. I was excited because we got to explore Alan a little bit rather than have him be just a one-dimensional character that's kind of weird and saying random things. In this third instalment I think there's a little bit more of an emotional arc with him, which I appreciate. It's more of a story than just jokes with Alan this time. I don't know at the end of this where Alan goes. I think it's kind of open-ended, but at least he seems like he's on the right path.

I was going to ask where you see him five years from now.

Running the Tea Party. No, that's just a good-natured joke. I don't know where Alan would be. Hopefully he's married, and he probably drives by Phil's house a lot and honks to see if Phil will come out, and then Phil maybe looks through his blinds to see who it is, if it's Alan outside. Every other Thursday Phil will come out and say hi to him.

They've been billing this as the final instalment. Why is the trilogy the standard for film series?

Well, part of it is overstaying your welcome, I think. After the first one I was fine with just leaving well enough alone, to be honest. But then it was so fun to do the movies, and I thought there was more to explore, ultimately. But after the third one ... it's part of, as I said, not overstaying your welcome, and just the timing of it seems right to not do anything else with this. I've never really thought about the trilogy thing. The good thing about the third one is it allows kind of a nice goodbye. With the second one there's no closure, really. There was an event, they'll go on with their lives. This one seems like there's a little bit of closure.

The Hangover films have been phenomenally successful. If this one follows suit, do you think you'll have to try to talk them out of making a fourth one?

Well, I think it's bad to do movies because of economic gain. As an entertainer or an actor, you want to try to do other things and challenge yourself to try other roles, and it's time to move on. I think everybody feels that, the director and the other actors — and not out of anything but love. There won't be a fourth.

Speaking of doing new things, you're currently filming Birdman, a comedy from Alejandro Gonzalez Iñárritu, who's better known for heavier films.

It's a comedy, and Alejandro hasn't made one. He's a great filmmaker, obviously. The little I can tell you about (it) is you kind of know you're in the hands of a really experienced technician and great filmmaker. It's been a really great work experience for me. I'm there with really serious actors who've done really accomplished work. I think I'm the only one in the cast who's never won a trophy ...

Jordana Brewster lives life in the fast lane

Fast & Furious 6. In a high action movie full of muscles and mayhem, actress taps into her maternal side

RICHARD PECKETT

Metro World News

There are very few movies where you can use phrases like "oiled bodies" and "torqued to the max" and accurately describe both men and machines — but Fast & Furious 6 is one of them. It's the series' latest gear-head film where muscle Dominic Toretto (Vin Diesel) and the rest of his car-thievin' gang smash bang and wallop their way through yet another international criminal threat. The sixth instalment brings its hefty carbon footprint to London to stop the evil Brit, Owen Shaw (Luke Evans), with all the death-defying stunts, explosions and sick-making driving we've come to expect from the franchise. Amongst all of the testosterone-fuelled fist pumping and steely looks, there's the relative calm of Jordana Brewster, who plays Mia Toretto, Vin Diesel's on-screen sister and linchpin of the "criminal family." We chat to Jordana about real-life speeding, babies and why guys who drive souped-up cars are "douche bags."

It's an intense, high-octane movie that frankly gave me heart palpitations. What gets your heart racing?

Ah, you know, I'm really claustrophobic, so that'll get my heart racing.

Any bad experiences?

I think it's something that comes with age, and I'm only 33, but it happened in my late 20s: I got in a plane and it felt really enclosed and I started freaking out and I just couldn't breathe.

You play quite a maternal role in the latest Fast and Furious, has the film made you broody at all?

Show offs

What's with guys and flashy cars?

Guys that drive souped-up, flashy cars look a bit ridiculous. Do you think that they're a bit of a penis extension?

I think they can be for some men ... and you usually know when you see it. The car that's the loudest and the flashiest will have a douche bag behind the wheel. Yeah, it's like jewelry or the bag you're wearing, you shouldn't have to show off too much through something material.

Has it made me broody? Meaning wanting a baby? Yeah. I definitely want kids really soon. I would like two or three, so I better get started and my husband, who is eleven years older than me, is game whenever I'm game.

The girls do as much fighting as the guys, are you a little envious that you didn't get a few more fight scenes?

A little bit. That was a sacrifice ... I love what the baby brings into the mix. I love that it shows (Diesel's character) Dom's very sweet vulnerable side. The fact that he has a new nephew shows the new dynamic in Mia and Brian's relationship, but I didn't get to kick ass like Gal (Gadot), Michelle (Rodriguez), and Gina (Carano).

I've been in quite embarrassingly pathetic scuffles. Have you ever been in a proper fight?

A girl slapped me once. I went to an all girls' school in New York and a girl slapped me in the dark room — I was developing pictures — and she slapped me and I slapped her back. It was a bitch slap.

Is that the worst girly battle you've been in?

Actually no, my sister and I would get in really bad fights when we were younger and I would threaten to bite her all the time. So I would bare my teeth and that was my threat ... Yeah, we were just really aggressive.

Pinkett Smith talks the power of women

Angela Davis doc.
Actress says spending time with activist changed her and prompted growth

Jada Pinkett Smith may have started as an actress, but these days her list of jobs includes author, singer-songwriter, philanthropist, successful businesswoman — and, of course, wife and mother.

With husband Will Smith, she started Overbrook Entertainment, which has produced many of Smith's films, as well as the upcoming remake of Annie. But Pinkett Smith's more recent focus has been the documentary Free Angela Davis and Other Political Prisoners, which marks the 40th anniversary of the acquittal of the 1970s political activist who was once on the FBI's Most Wanted list.

Davis was removed from her teaching job at UCLA in 1969 because she was a member of the Communist Party. A year later, she was charged with murder and kidnapping in a shootout in front of the Marin County, Calif., courthouse, then acquitted by an all-white jury.

Pinkett Smith says she learned a lot from spending time with Davis, who was by her side for this interview.

What did you know about Angela Davis growing up?

I knew that she was a pivotal part of the movement and I knew that she was powerful and I knew that she was intelligent, but what I didn't receive was the beauty of her feminine side, you know, and her softness, and the strength in her vulnerable nature ... I've learned a lot just simply being in her presence in that way.

You seem quite comfortable sharing your views on social media — you recently asked whether white women should be allowed on the cover of black women's magazines.

One of the reasons that I did that is right now one of my very strong focuses at this point is trying to figure out how to engage women to flow power to one another. The idea is that there's a white woman's issue. Or there's a black woman's issue. There's a Latina woman's issue. The idea for women to understand is that if we could come together and flow each other power for issues that affect us all, that we would get a lot done.

These are subjects that we can't be afraid to talk about because they hurt. That's the step toward getting to solutions, and the step toward community.

This slow moving Mississippi river-set movie features infidelity, murder and theft, but at its heart it isn't really about any of those things. Not really. Instead it's a story about the things we do for love. When two 14-year-old boys discover a mysterious stranger named Mud (Matthew McConaughey) living on a remote island, they get drawn into a possibly illegal scheme to reunite the loner with his true love Juniper (Reese Witherspoon). Methodical and moody, the film takes its time telling the story, but the performances — particularly from McConaughey and child actor Tye Sheridan — are stellar and quietly effective.

Stars. Robert Redford, Nick Nolte, Stanley Tucci

Robert Redford does triple duty as actor, producer and director on the story of Jim Grant, an ex-member of a radical activist group, in hiding since a robbery resulted in the death of a security guard 30 years ago. When one of his former associates (Susan Sarandon) turns herself in, Grant goes on the lam, pursued by the FBI and a dogged reporter (Shia LaBeouf). An all-star cast (Nick Nolte, Terrence Howard and Julie Christie) fuels this thriller. Trouble is, there aren't many thrills. RICHARD CROUSE

Big networks, big names, big plans

What's changed for FOX, NBC and ABC as they battle for ratings.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Fox network's new season plans

What's new

Jack is back! A signature character from Fox's history, Kiefer Sutherland's Jack Bauer returns with 24, at least for a little while. Fox is launching a series of high-profile mini-series, and the first will come next May with a 12-episode run of 24, which went off the air in 2010. The second such series, Wayward Pines, will be a thriller produced by M. Night Shyamalan and starring Matt Dillon, based on the novel Pines.

What's gone

Randy Jackson, for one. The last of the original American Idol judges is leaving with the franchise in a ratings free-fall. Fox was keeping mum on the issue Monday, but Mariah Carey, Nicki Minaj and Keith Urban may want to avoid long-term leases. Fox programming chief Kevin Reilly said the show will likely revert to a three-judge panel. He blamed format issues more than the judges for this year's ratings problems.

Seth MacFarlane

Star power

Seth MacFarlane. J.J. Abrams. M. Night Shyamalan. They may not generate celebrity magazine covers (although MacFarlane did host the Oscars this year), but they are the type of brand-name creative forces that Fox's young audience respects. They all have projects coming up on Fox during the next year.

What they need

If American Idol is never going to be the dominant force it once was — and that would be asking an awful lot — Fox needs another show that can be attractive to all audiences. Let's face it. Even if The Following was Fox's most popular newcomer this year, a show about a serial killer is never going to fill that bill.

Big move

Fox's Saturday nights of fugitives, drunks and losers is gone as the network turns its lineup over entirely to sports. The long-running series Cops is switching to Spike.

NBC's plans for the upcoming television season

What's new

A lot. The long-struggling network invested heavily in new programming, and has ordered 17 new series for next season. John Malkovich as Blackbeard. James Spader as a wanted fugitive. Dracula brought to life. A cops drama from the guy who made Law & Order. More supernatural stuff from J.J. Abrams. A cooking show. A quiz show. A home renovation show. If a couple of these make an impression on viewers, NBC will be thrilled.

What's gone

The newsmagazine Rock Center, in a move sure to cause bad blood between NBC's news and entertainment divisions. Matthew Perry's star vehicle Go On, failing to recreate that Friends magic. And about two dozen other sitcoms you never watched.

Life support

The serial killer drama Hannibal has terrible ratings, but NBC had such high hopes for it this spring that executives can't bear to pull the plug. Maybe it's their livers on the line.

Star power

Michael J. Fox is a beloved sitcom actor, respected even more for his dignity in handling Parkinson's Disease. Now he's essentially turning those real-life experiences into a sitcom, where he will play a sportscaster going back to work. Interestingly, NBC gave Sean Hayes a more prominent spot on a Thursday night schedule geared to broad-appeal comedies, perhaps so Fox won't feel the pressure to save the network. And Seth Meyers is moving from his Weekend Update desk to his own late night show.

Michael J. Fox

What they need

Somebody to save the network.

Big move

Revolution moves to Wednesday nights, where it will no longer have the advantage of a big audience tuning in for The Voice. Chicago Fire moves to Tuesday. Moving successful shows to new nights is always risky, perhaps even more so for programs at an early stage in their development.

Highlights of ABC's fall schedule

What's new

Tuesday night. ABC is scheduling four of the eight new series on its fall schedule for Tuesday night, making it an entire evening of new shows. That's a bold move for a network, which usually likes to couple new series with established ones on its schedule. One of them, Marvel's Agents of S.H.I.E.L.D., is a crime-fighting series based on a comic book and produced by Joss Whedon. That might even entice — gasp! — some men to watch ABC.

What's gone

Happy Endings, Body of Proof and Malibu Country.

Big move

Cutting Dancing With the Stars from two nights to one in the fall, eliminating the Tuesday results show. On its face, that seems a strange decision for what is usually ABC's most popular show. But the Dancing audience is filled overwhelmingly with older women, and advertisers consider that one of the least valuable demographic groups. ABC entertainment chief Paul Lee said the network will try to cast more dancers popular with a younger audience.

Star power

James Caan. Well, maybe he was in 1980 or so. But ABC is asking him to largely carry a new show, Back in the Game, where he plays "an opinionated, beer-guzzling ex-athlete who never quite made the cut either as a single father or professional baseball player." In Bad News Bears fashion, he's asked to coach a team of misfits, including his grandson.

James Caan

What they need

Viewers. Lee talks about building a brand with sophisticated and emotional shows. That's nice, but ABC is in the same boat as every other broadcast network not named CBS. Its audience and influence is dwindling, and it can use a breakout hit or two.

Arrested Development.

The 15-episode run will be available all at once on Netflix on May 26

TODD

Metro World News in Hollywood

Although it's hard to pinpoint precisely why Arrested Development failed to connect with many viewers during its initial, three-season, 53-episode run, it seems likely that one reason was the show's narrative density.

While its main thrust was chronicling Michael Bluth's efforts to corral his wildly dysfunctional family, the series featured countless plot lines that slowly shifted into focus thanks to asides and ever-evolving references that rewarded obsessive attention spans and returning fans rather than first-time or sporadic viewership.

Now that the show is finally back, creator Mitch Hurwitz spared no effort in creating 15 new episodes that are as complex and layered as their predecessors. But even though audiences will enjoy the luxury of sorting through them all at once thanks to their simultaneous release on Netflix May 26, the show's cast is quick to observe that even they struggled occasionally to wrap their heads around dialogue that might eventually be meaningful in as many as three or four different ways.

"I'll try to explain it clearly but it'll come out probably

Tony Hale, Jeffrey Tambor, David Cross, Ted Sarandos, Michael Cera and Alia Shawkat attend the red carpet premiere for the launch of Netflix Original Series, Arrested Development, season four at Vue Leicester Square on May 9 in London, England. STUART C. WILSON/GETTY IMAGES FOR NETFLIX really confusing," confesses Michael Cera, who rejoined the show's fourth season as a writer as well as a co-star. "But there was one scene that was like a five-page scene in the computer lab, and different sections of this scene would appear in different episodes. So you'd be actually having to deliver a line that made sense in multiple, different contexts, that actually play against each other, and we'd have to deliver it in a way that tries to work for all three of those. And then you'd see an episode and you have different information and it means something totally different. That was really confusing."

Ironically, Portia de Rossi, who plays Michael's delusionally well-intentioned sister

Lindsay, insists that the structure of the episodes, which follows just one character's point of view rather than all of them, should actually be easier, not more difficult, for viewers to understand.

"It's easier to digest than the original series, because we were following storylines A, B, C, D, E, and F," she explains. "Now, we're just following this one character, so in a way it's easier to watch, and we've got a little bit more time to tell the story — as much time as we need."

What seems to excite the cast the most is not simply the process of reuniting for more fun, but for the experience of creating something that seems largely unlike anything else that's been on television — even including in the original show.

David Cross, who plays Lindsay's feckless husband Tobias, says that audiences will thrill at the experience — that is, after they get used to it.

"I think it's going to be a bit of an epiphany or a revelation," he says. "You're going to realize, 'There's a structure to this that I wasn't aware of when I started watching.' That's going to make everybody triple-excited, and there's going to be a sense of discovery to it that I think will be really exciting, and really define what TV can do."

Despite the fact that only two of the episodes will focus on his character Michael's peccadilloes, Jason Bateman remains a unifying presence as he sums up the experience of getting "Arrested" again.

"I hope that's appreciated by the few people who do love the show," he says diplomatically. "They seem to be a group who likes things somewhat challenging. And the fact that Netflix affords (Mitch) the opportunity to have these stories go out over 15 different episodes, that are so intertwined that the same scene will repeat, from different angles, in multiple episodes, is a really unique thing and exciting thing to be a part of, in working with his complexity and with Netflix's distribution platform. It's a neat time to watch TV."

Sebu Simonian and Ryan Merchant, two jingle writers, have formed Capital Cities. HANDOUT

Two jingle writers come up with a Capital idea

Techno music. Capital Cities make music that's "fun and upbeat and joyous" while still venturing into some dark experimental sounds

JULIE SHANNON

Metro World News

It was instant creative chemistry when Sebu Simonian and Ryan Merchant met through Craigslist a few years ago — which is fortunate, because Merchant was the only one who responded to Simonian's post.

"He was looking for a producer to help him with his solo project," Simonian says. "He sent me some samples of his songs, which were really good. When we got together, we collaborated immediately."

The pair spent a couple of

Just Breathe

Capital Cities went bold with the decision to cover Pink Floyd's classic Breathe. Then they went bolder, adding in a little Tupac Shakur to the song.

- Quote. "To be quite honest, it was a spur-of-the-moment inspirational experiment," Simonian says. "We spontaneously thought it would be nice if we could throw a rap person in here."

years penning jingles for TV commercials, but they always had other projects floating around, too.

"We collaborated on all kinds of stuff and putting together ideas," says Simonian.

"We realized all that repertoire was prime material to start a band."

So they did just that, starting the band Capital Cities in 2010 and putting out an EP the following summer. Their debut album, In a Tidal Wave of Mystery, comes out June 11.

As for describing their style, Simonian says Michael Jackson, Pink Floyd and The Beatles are among their influences. You could call it alternative-pop, or techno, or alternative dance with a blend of upbeat, catchy tunes — or something else altogether. The indefinable quality is "somewhat intentional."

"It doesn't matter to me what we're categorized," Simonian says.

"Ryan and I try to make good music. Overall, we definitely like to make it dancey — electronic, in-your-face, fun and upbeat and joyous — but we do try to venture into the dark side sometimes with experimental sound. Sometimes the lyrics take turns, and we try to balance it out with depth and more edgy and dark moments."

The Rascalz, joined by Toronto's Choclaire, Checkmate, Thrust and Kardinal Offishall all saw career breakthroughs thanks to the song Northern Touch. FRANK GUNN/THE CANADIAN PRESS

After 15 years, they still have the Touch

Canadian hip hop.

Hit single Northern Touch proved to be a breakthrough for the genre as well as a number of the artists who were on the track

The chorus of one of Canada's most famous rap songs almost didn't happen.

As Toronto's Choclaire, Thrust and Kardinal Offishall put the finishing touches on the highly popular single Northern Touch in the summer of 1997, Offishall struggled with constant sneezing.

"I think this might have been the first year that I actually had allergies. The day that we did Northern Touch I probably sneezed literally about 500 times," said Offishall. "I had a box of Kleenex by my side that day.

Big name director

The music video was also one of the earliest by Director X, then known as Little X

- Getting bigger names. He's gone on to direct videos by superstars including Jay-Z, Justin Bieber and Nelly Furtado. Director X also won a Juno for the video to Drake's HYFR.

"That's one of those days I won't forget because we were at the studio, everybody was there, and I was just sneezing like a friggin' maniac while all this history is being made."

The lead single from the Rascalz's album Cash Crop, which went on to become one of the most successful hip-hop songs in Canadian history. It reached No. 41 on the top singles chart in 1998, the first domestic urban song to crack the top 100.

There was a common feeling among the artists involved regarding the breakthrough. Canadian hip-hop had largely been an underground phenomenon up to that point.

"Canada didn't support hip-hop on the level that it does now, all those years ago," said Offishall. "You have to understand, there was no Internet, there was no nothing to support us."

The popularity of Northern Touch did much to change that bias.

"That track just never dies," said Thrust, who was also on the track. "It's the beauty of people always coming up to you saying, 'Yo! I know that you're the one who did that verse!' And people can always quote it."

Sevigny says 'comfortable shoes' will chase off Paltrow's Met Gala blues

Chloe Sevigny thinks Gwyneth Paltrow may be overreacting by claiming she's through with the Met Gala. (Paltrow has sworn off the swanky New York event after finding this year's "un-fun" and too hot.) "Maybe her sleeves were too tight. If you're in a dress where you can't breathe, then you're not comfortable," Sevigny tells New York magazine. "You have to wear comfortable shoes and an outfit you can be OK in." The most important thing, according to Sevigny, is to not take it all so seriously. "I think it depends on what table you're at, and who you're with, and obviously your attitude," she says. "But it's a lot of hoopla over not a lot. Everybody thinks it's so much pressure, and you do the carpet and it's such a big deal, and it's just a museum fundraiser, you know?"

Recent behaviour suggests that Selena Gomez really isn't single Selena Gomez may have recently declared herself single in a radio interview, but the amount of time she's spending around Justin Bieber's house seems to suggest otherwise. Gomez was spotted leaving her on-again, off-again boyfriend's home late Tuesday morning, or so says an E! News report. According to an eyewitness, Gomez looked "happy" and "spent the rest of the day at home." Bieber, for his part, was in the recording studio most of the day.

I've met enough wine-makers who think they're rock stars, so I guess it's only fair that a rock star can think himself a winemaker. Dave Matthews, the man behind the newly released The Dreaming Tree wines, is only the latest celeb to grape it up.

The roster of famous names making wine reads like an awards show guest list: Greg Norman, Mike Weir, Dan Aykroyd, Francis Ford Coppola, Sting, Wayne Gretzky, Madonna, and even Brangelina.

While I'd never suggest the others are dialing it in, Matthews has been hands on in choosing his Californian wine partners, and the resulting juice (if you'll forgive the obvious pun) sings in the glass.

Cheeseburgers with Mango-Chile Salsa.

Fire up the barbecue this weekend and try a unique combination

This tasty cheeseburger recipe that includes the nutrient-rich, sweet mango mixed into a salsa with fiery chiles to add a south Asian flavour that will delight your taste buds.

1. Combine patty ingredients, keeping the mixture crumbly rather than compressed. With wet hands, gently form four loosely packed patties of equal size, each about 3/4 inch thick. Don't compact the meat too much or the patties will be tough. Using your thumb or the back of a spoon, make a shallow indentation about 1 inch wide in the centre of each patty. This will help the patties cook evenly and prevent them from puffing on the grill.

Ingredients

Patties

- 1 1/2 lbs ground chuck (80% lean)
- 1/2 tsp garlic powder
- 1/2 tsp kosher salt
- 1/2 tsp ground black pepper

Salsa

- 1 large mango, cut into 1/2-inch dice (about 1 cup)
- 2 tbsp roughly chopped fresh cilantro leaves
- 1 tbsp fresh lime juice
- 1 medium serrano chile pepper, seeded and minced
- 1/4 tsp kosher salt

Burgers

- 4 thin slices pepper jack cheese
- 4 hamburger buns, split
- Dijon mustard

This recipe serves four. NEWS CANADA

2. In a non-reactive bowl combine the salsa ingredients. Toss gently and then refrigerate for at least 30 minutes or up to 1 hour. (After an hour, the fruit starts to become mushy.)

3. Prepare the grill for direct cooking over medium-high heat (400 to 500 F).

4. Grill the patties over direct medium-high heat, with the lid closed, until cooked to medium doneness, 8 to 10 minutes, turning once when the patties release easily from the grate without sticking. During the last minute of grilling time, place a slice of cheese on each patty to melt, and toast the buns, cut side down, over direct heat.

5. Spread the bottom half of each bun with Dijon mustard, and serve the patties warm on the buns topped with mango salsa.

REVUE TO HEAT UP WINNIPEG

CHIPPENDALES MALE DANCERS TO GRACE THE TRANSCONA COUNTRY CLUB STAGE

For the first time in 12 years, Rockstar Entertainment is bringing the entertaining Chippendales revue show to Winnipeg.

With seven sculpted, male dancers, the Chippendales are sure to make Winnipeg women swoon.

The Chippendales show on May 17 at the Transcona Country Club features male dancers that has been in design concept and planning stages for about five months with many hurdles to cross. There have been a few difficulties with its planning stages due to the nature of the show and its content. But now that it's ready, attendees will be impressed.

One of the hurdles involved the Manitoba Liquor Commission and the laws and rules it has set for a show like this one. But the right fit was found to make the show exciting. The Chippendales show features more than 100 lighting queues, which is more lights than the average rock concert.

There are also future plans for bringing in such artists as Michael J. Fox, Bill Nye the Science Guy and other artists who always attract a captive audience.

Rockstar Entertainment is a live entertainment company that finances and organizes sporting events and theatrical productions in Manitoba.

While there are many shows ahead, the Chippendales are kicking off their summer tour in Brandon at Houston's Country Roadhouse on July 29 and 30. But the fun doesn't stop there — the boys will also make stops in Regina and Calgary during the first week of August. There will be many surprises in store for women in attendance.

Many companies have helped make this show a success, such as Dream Day Decorators, Cherry Tree Productions, Lisa Omand with Passion Parties, Bada Bing Party Bus, Max Pro Entertainment, F.A.C.E Productions, and Summer Bounce Entertainment.

Bombers support Aprile's decision to stay in school

Giovanni Aprile, a third-round draft pick of the Winnipeg Blue Bombers last year, is returning to university for his final year of eligibility after being accepted into a one-year teacher's college program.

Aprile was drafted 16th overall in 2012 and attended training camp last season before returning to Queen's where he played in seven games, catching 36 passes for 619 yards and three touchdowns.

Bombers general manager Joe Mack wished him well Thursday and said they look forward to seeing him at camp next year.

"Our organization fully supports a decision like this when it comes to a young man's future and preparing for life after football," said Mack.

Marchand's OT goal gives Bruins win over Rangers

Brad Marchand scored with 4:20 left in the first overtime and the Boston Bruins beat the New York Rangers 3-2 in the first playoff game in 40 years between the Original Six teams.

Marchand, Boston's top goal scorer in the regular season, got his first of the post-season on a pass from Patrice Bergeron. Marchand had carried the puck up the right side, passed it to Bergeron and kept going toward the net. Bergeron passed across the slot and Marchand tipped it past goalie Henrik Lundqvist from the left side of the crease.

It's kill or be killed for Sens in Game 2

NHL playoffs. League's top penalty kill must get stops to prolong series with East's No. 1 seed, Senators say

Even as numbers on a roster, the Pittsburgh Penguins' power play appears intimidating.

At times on the ice, it looks borderline unfair.

Start with two NHL MVPs in Sidney Crosby and Evgeni Malkin. Add a future hall of famer like Jarome Iginla and a Norris Trophy finalist in defenceman Kris Letang. Throw in a grinder to do the dirty work in Chris Kunitz and the Penguins have a unit that's an electric mix of skill, speed and grit.

Give them two minutes to work and they can quickly turn a game into a mismatch. It's a lesson the Ottawa Senators painfully learned during a 4-1 loss to the Penguins in Game 1 of the Eastern Conference semifinals on Tuesday.

Despite dictating play at even strength for long stretches, the Sens were practically blown out on the scoreboard after the Penguins went 2-for-3 on the power play and even added a shorthanded goal.

Pittsburgh made it look easy against the NHL's best penalty-killing team. The Senators stopped 88 per cent of the power plays they faced during the regular season, easily tops in the league.

All power plays, however, are not created equal. And if the Sens want to even the series on Friday night, they have to either stay out of the penalty box or find a way to stop a power-play unit that's scoring at a 38 per cent clip in the playoffs.

The key to Pittsburgh's success relies on remarkable talent that few — if any — teams can match.

"They have basically five all-stars on the first (power play) and it's tough to chase them and get hits on them when they're moving the puck properly," Ottawa defenceman Marc Methot said. "We've got to be better."

It might already be too late. The Senators have won just two playoff series in franchise history after dropping the first game — none since 2003 — and have never rallied from a 2-0 deficit in the post-season.

Yet Ottawa remains upbeat, pointing to the way it was able to tilt the ice at even strength, peppering Pittsburgh goaltender Tomas Vokoun with 36 shots. A bounce here, a bounce there and a little more production on the power play — where the Senators were 0-for-6 in the opener — and Ottawa believes it can head home with things all tied up.

"We're a confident group in here," Methot said. "We know we can hang in there with them."

Memorial Cup. After massive pre-tournament layoff, Blades host Knights on Friday night

The 2013 MasterCard Memorial Cup won't be short on intriguing storylines.

First there are the hosts who want to make amends for an up-and-down season. Add to the mix a record-setting powerhouse from Nova Scotia, a club from Ontario that scored in the final second of Game 7 to advance, and a team from Oregon that used a coach's suspension as a rallying cry.

Oh, and then there's three of the top prospects for this year's NHL draft, not to men-

Mooseheads-Winterhawks

Saturday presents scintillating talent clash

Saturday provides a mouth-watering game for scouts and fans alike.

The matchup between Halifax and Portland features Winterhawks defence-man Seth Jones, ranked as the No. 1 North American skater by NHL Central Scouting, and Mooseheads forwards Nathan MacKinnon and Jonathan Drouin, who sit at No. 2 and No. 3.

The No. 1 Mooseheads had only six losses in the regular season, a record for the QMJHL and just one shy of the all-time CHL mark.

tion at least five others who could go in the first round.

The annual 10-day tournament to decide the Canadian Hockey League championship begins Friday with the host Saskatoon Blades taking on the Ontario Hockey League's London Knights in a game that features teams that took very different routes to get here.

The second matchup of the round-robin format goes Saturday with the Halifax Mooseheads of the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League meeting the Portland Winterhawks of Western Hockey League.

The Blades' 2012-13 campaign included a rough start, an 18-game winning streak and a shocking first-round sweep — all of which were documented by a reality television crew that tracked their every move.

The Knights, meanwhile, cruised through the regular season and the first three rounds of the playoffs before finding themselves down 3-1 in the OHL final against the Barrie Colts. London fought back to win three straight, clinching the league title in dramatic fashion when Bo Horvat scored with less than a second to go in the deciding game to give the Knights a 3-2 win.

The Blades meanwhile have been waiting for this moment for some time.

"Since we were awarded (the tournament) a year and a half ago the focus was on the start of the Memorial Cup," Blades coach Lorne Molleken said. "We're all excited to get things underway. Our players, I can tell you, they're tired of practising."

Knights coach Dale Hunter is also confident his team will be ready, despite the travel and quick turnaround.

London, which won the Memorial Cup as the host back in 2005, lost in last year's final in overtime to Shawinigan.

"Every game is like a Game 7 here. It pretty much controls your destiny for the rest of the tournament," Knights forward Max Domi said. "Last year we were a pretty young team."

"We look at ourselves as a pretty experienced group and we're expecting big things."

World championship.

A fourth straight loss in the round of eight suffered at the hands of Sweden in shootout

Canada was eliminated in the quarter-finals of the IIHF World Championship for a fourth straight year with a 3-2 shootout loss to host Sweden on Thursday.

Fredrik Pettersson scored the winner in the fourth round of the shootout as Sweden moved on to a semifinal meeting with archrival Finland.

Trailing 1-0, Nicklas Danielsson scored a pair of power-play goals in the third period to give the hosts a 2-1 ment to four straight years. Canada last advanced to the semifinals in 2009 en route to a silver medal under current Canadian head coach Lindy Ruff.

In other quarter-finals, Switzerland extended its unbeaten run in the tournament to eight wins with a 2-1 win over the Czech Republic. They'll face the United States, an 8-3 winner in Helsinki over a Russian team that had Alex Ovechkin in the lineup, in Saturday's semifinal.

Finland edged Slovakia 4-3 in Helsinki's other quarter-final.

The semifinals and Sunday's bronze- and gold-medal games are in Stockholm.

Canada had beaten the host country 3-0 in the preliminary round, but that was before the arrival of Swedish forwards Henrik and Daniel Sedin and defenceman Alex Edler from the Vancouver Canucks.

NBA playoffs

Wade heats up in series clincher

It was an hour or so after the Miami Heat punched their ticket back to the Eastern Conference finals, and a question was asked about the perceived demise of Dwyane Wade's abilities.

LeBron James was not pleased.

"He's a hall of famer. He has two rings," James said. "He doesn't need to prove himself to anyone. No one."

Maybe, maybe not.

But just in case, Wade ignored his aching right knee and put those oft-questioned skills on full display to earn his fifth trip to the East finals.

Over the last 5.5 minutes of Miami's 94-91 second-round clinching win over the Chicago Bulls, Wade was the only Heat player with a field goal, going 3-for-3. He had three rebounds, half of Miami's total in that span, along with his team's only blocked shot. And with two short floaters — set up by the "Eurostep" move that he's made a trademark — along with a strong dunk after a rebound, Wade offered a reminder that he's still more than capable of elite moments.

"I always try to overcome," Wade said. "I understand certain things will be said. But I'm harder on myself than anybody."

He's averaging only 13 points per game in this post-season, by far his lowest clip in nine trips to the playoffs, and simply could not care less about what the stat sheet says in that regard.

NBA. Days of Thunder limited without Westbrook

The way Kevin Martin describes it, the Oklahoma City Thunder lost the "vision" of a potential championship run the morning they learned all-star point guard Russell Westbrook would be out for the rest of the post-season.

Despite fighting to the end in a series of narrow losses to Memphis, the Thunder's season — which seemed so promising even when the playoffs began — is over much sooner than expected following a five-game loss in the Western Conference semifinals.

After making it to the NBA Finals a year earlier, Oklahoma City claimed the No. 1 seed in the West and was the favourite to make it back.

And then?

"We lost the guy that has the keys to our car," Martin said Thursday.

Right up until the end, the club believed it could overcome even Westbrook's injury, suffered in a chance collision with Houston's Patrick Beverley in Game 2 of the first round. But after winning the next game, Oklahoma City went 2-6 without Westbrook.

After Westbrook's injury, Kevin Durant averaged 31.8 points, 9.9 rebounds and 6.2 assists. It still wasn't enough to lift his team. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Blue Jays sluggers fuelling scoring blitz

'This team was built to score runs.' More batters loading bases as Toronto speeds to playoff pace

Though it sputtered to start the season, the Blue Jays offense is surging as they head to New York City riding a four-game winning streak.

Since being shut out by the Boston Red Sox a week ago, the Jays have averaged nine runs and more than 12 hits per game. Since pummeling Seattle 10-2 on May 5, the offensive numbers are still strong, averaging almost seven runs per game.

The result has been a 7-3 record over their last 10, which is pretty much how the Jays must perform over the remaining three-quarters of the season if they have any hope of playing in October.

The good news is that when the Jays are scoring like they are right now, they usually win. They're 13-0 when putting five or more on the board, compared to 4-24 when they score four or fewer. Their pitching and defence simply have not been good enough to carry them in low-scoring games.

"This team was built to score runs," manager John Gibbons repeated often during the club's sluggish start to the season. "And I believe we will."

But there were signs of a pending turnaround beyond Gibbons' optimism.

No lack of talent

"As we've said before, there's a track record in this clubhouse."

J.P. Arencibia, whose 10 home runs are tied for second in the AL.

The club's league-worst .262 batting average on balls in play (BABIP) — a statistic that measures how many balls put into play, minus home runs, land for hits — in late April suggested they were somewhat unlucky in the first month of the season. Their BABIP so far this month is .302, which is about the league average.

And even as they struggled to produce consistently in April, they were still among the league leaders in home runs. Trouble was most of them were solo shots. Now they're still hitting the ball out of the park — their 53 homers are tied with Texas and Cleveland for the major-league lead — but doing so with men on base.

Gibbons said after Wednesday's 11-3 win over the San Francisco Giants that his club may have been a little pull-happy early in the season.

"You know, looking for the long ball." TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

The Dominican trinity

The recent surge has been due to the improved play of the Jays' three most important hitters (at least while Jose Reyes is still out): Melky Cabrera, Jose Bautista and Edwin Encarnacion.

- Since Gibbons placed the Dominican trio 1-2-3 in the batting order on Saturday, the Jays have scored 33 runs. Cabrera, Bautista and Encarnacion combined to score or drive in 29 of those runs.

- Others are contributing, too. Brett Lawrie, who was rushed back after Reyes went down, has showed marked improvement, while Adam Lind increased his batting average by 100 points this month.

Bradley breaks course record

Byron Nelson Championship. Young American shakes off poor start to wow golf elite with 10-under showing in round 1

Keegan Bradley had no thoughts about a course record, or the possibility of a 59, after consecutive bogeys in the middle of his opening round at the Byron Nelson Championship.

Until his 136-yard wedge shot on his final hole Thursday. "It was going right at it. (A 59) crossed my mind for a second, and it would be unbelievable if I buried this," Bradley said. "But I had three feet to shoot 60. I was actually very nervous, uncomfortable over it and thank God I made it."

Bradley shot a 10-under 60, completed by that short birdie at the 428-yard ninth hole, to break the TPC Four Seasons course record and match the best round ever at the Nelson. He topped his career PGA Tour best by three strokes and equalled Phil Mickelson's opening 60 at Phoenix as the best round on the tour this season.

After missing the fairways off the tees and making bogeys at No. 18 and then No. 1, Bradley was at 3 under. He made a 17-foot birdie putt at the 221-yard second hole, and was 7 under his final eight holes with an eagle-birdie-birdie finish.

"It was rare to match up a ball-striking day and make everything.... It happened today," Bradley said. "The hole looked huge. Even the putts I missed almost went in."

The 60, with 10 birdies and an eagle 3 at the 542-yard seventh, gave Bradley a three-stroke lead over 2011 Masters champion Charl Schwartzel.

Robert Karlsson, Harris English and Ted Potter Jr. shot 64, and two-time major champion Angel Cabrera, Ryan Palmer and Camilo Villegas were at 65. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Horoscopes

Aries

March 21 - April 20

This has been a busy week for you, so maybe you need to slow down a bit. Right. And maybe the Sun will rise in the west and the tide won't come in. Aries never slows down — it's not in your nature.

Taurus

April 21 - May 21

Mars in your sign gives you all the energy and ambition you need to make a name for yourself, so go for it. Too often in the past you have waited for other people to take the lead.

Gemini

May 22 - June 21

The thing you need to realize is that you don't have to enjoy something to be good at it. If fate points you in a certain direction today then that is the direction you should move.

Cancer

June 22 - July 23

Listen to what others say you should do today — then do the opposite. You know your mind better than they do so follow what your instincts tell you.

Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

Today, you will be confronted by someone who has more power than you but that must not be allowed to faze you. They may have might on their side but you have right and that's why you will win in the end.

Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

You may have strong opinions about an issue but don't waste your time shouting about it. Find ways you can make a practical difference, then get on with them quietly. It's not about words, it's about actions.

Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

Having told so many people what you intend to accomplish don't you think it's about time you started actually doing it? Anyone can talk about making a difference but only a few people ever get round to it.

Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

Mars in your opposite sign of Taurus will help you get rid of an emotional attachment you no longer need. Scorpio has a reputation for ruthlessness and today everyone will see it.

Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

You may be tempted to work twice as hard at something to make sure you get it done on time but it is necessary to put in so much effort and maybe exhaust yourself? No. Ease up.

Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

Be careful what you start over the next 24 hours because you will have no choice but to finish it before you can move on to something else. Think before you act and don't let your passions rule you.

Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

Chances are you will find yourself involved in some kind of dispute with your nearest and dearest. Whatever else happens, you must resist the urge to open up old wounds.

Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

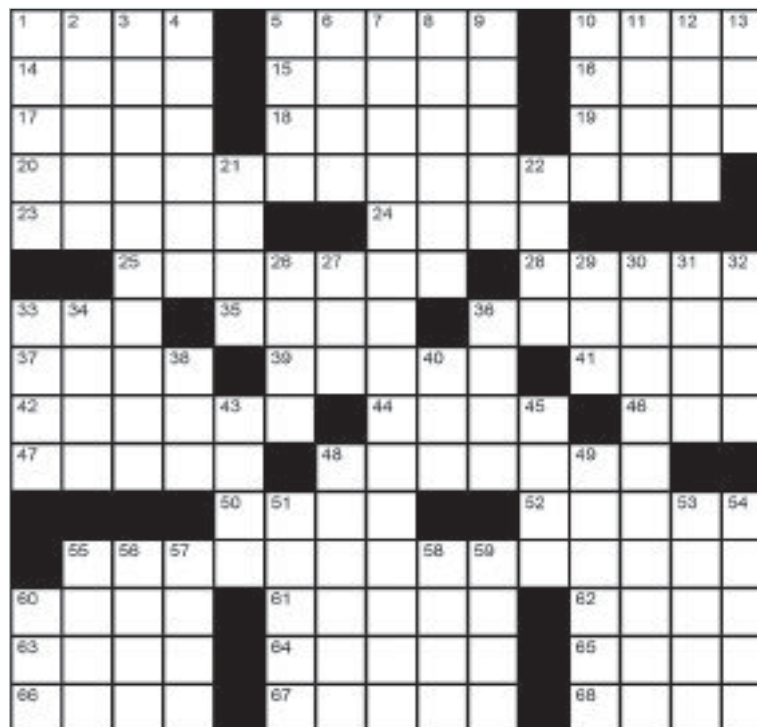

Someone else's good idea can be adapted by you to suit your own needs. Is that immoral? Of course not. There is no copyright on ideas, so you are free to take it and develop it any way you see fit. SALLY BROMPTON
